Following the announcement by the World Health Organization the night before (June 1) that it has approved the emergency use of the Chinese Coxing vaccine, the Ministry of Health pointed out that local private medical institutions will be able to introduce and administer this vaccine through special procedures.

However, because Kexing vaccine has not been included in Singapore's national vaccination plan, local vaccinators will not be able to claim compensation through the vaccine injury financial assistance program.

When inquired yesterday, the Ministry of Health said that it will announce more details in the next few days on how private medical institutions can apply to become legal suppliers of Kexing vaccines through special adoption procedures.

The Ministry of Health also said that the authorities are exploring the possibility of allowing private healthcare providers to use the local existing 200,000 doses of Coxing vaccine stocks, and will formulate details on pricing, providing sufficient information on vaccinators to make informed decisions, and the safety of vaccinators.

Health Minister Wang Yikang announced on Monday that it will allow private healthcare providers to introduce the coronavirus vaccine that has been included on the WHO's emergency use list through special adoption procedures. Currently included in the list are Pfizer and Moderna vaccines, as well as Johnson & Johnson, 分享 7eneca, SinoPharm and Kexing vaccines that have not yet been approved by the Health Sciences Bureau.

Several private medical providers said when inquired that they are still waiting for the authorities to announce the details. Among them, Dr. Li Xianjie, General Manager and Chief Operating Officer of Kangsheng Medical, said that the hospital is considering providing WHO-approved vaccines for suitable patients, and Ferui Hospital is working closely with the Bureau of Health Sciences to obtain the Coxing vaccine, but the pricing and quantity Undecided.

The two drug distributors reported that because the local market is not large, it is not realistic for merchants to purchase vaccines on a large scale. The main challenge of introducing vaccines is to find the source of goods and negotiate a reasonable order quantity and price.

Apex Pharma Marketing currently distributes more than 20 vaccines locally. General Manager Luo Peijun pointed out that the company is preparing to contact some vaccine manufacturers to discuss how to meet the needs of private medical professionals.

She said that some companies that sell pharmaceutical products locally, such as Johnson & Johnson and AstraZeneca, have designated distributors, and the company will mainly try to get in touch with other manufacturers. "At present, the local people's demand for these brands of vaccines is still difficult to estimate, but in the long run, if additional doses or regular vaccinations are required, I believe there will be a market. We will continue to monitor the situation and development."
